

When should I start getting screened?

Age 25

People with a cervix, start screenings for cervical cancer.

Age 40

Women at average risk for breast cancer, start getting a yearly mammogram.

Age 45

Anyone at average risk for colorectal cancer, start regular screening.

Age 50

Start screening for lung cancer if you smoked at least one pack per day for one year.

Age 50

If at average risk for prostate cancer, talk with your doctor about regular screening.

Do it for the ones you love.

Contact your doctor or visit peacehealth.org/services/cancer-screening

